

PROGRESS REMOVES HISTORIC BUILDING OF CAPITAL CITY

MARCELLA M. BYNON.

The wheel of time turns again. Wood on roofs and walls which sheltered former generations of mankind from the rain and sun...

Let me tell you my story as briefly as I can. I am the corner near the street from the Salmon Bank of Commerce, the one now being excavated...

The claim contained 616.02 acres of land and of this very generous gift they were much elated. The land contained in the claim began on the river bank on the west, ran east as far as Twelfth street...

No bit of land ever bore grander or more beautiful trees than I carried on my proud breast, and of these I was very fond.

the old ladies now, but the young ladies then, rave over her creations and the husbands over the bills. Personally I always thought Mrs. Vierani's hats were clever.

After Mr. Vierani died I remember that Eugene Fontaine, Maurice Klinger and Eugene Eckerline came to me and told me that they had come to appraise me. What an honor I thought to be appraised and by three such good situated men.

Once I was lamed but I didn't know it at the time. On April 21, 1910, the Vieranis leased me to Mr. A. E. Rutherford for a period of 25 years. However, this condition did not last long for on the fourth of the following March 1 was released to the Vieranis.

Then came the day when I was to sell for the highest price ever paid for a lot in Salem and to bring my first owner's prediction to a reality. Again I feel that it is to be regretted that Mr. Wilson cannot be here to see and know all that I have been permitted to experience.

My breast heaved with pride the other day when I looked up and saw many men and boys lined up on the sidewalk by my side watching the excavation work.

LUMBER MEN WIN RAILROAD RATE CASE

Interstate Commerce Commission Handed Down Important Decision Today

Washington, Nov. 27.—The interstate commerce commission today upheld the Eastern Oregon Lumber Producers' association complaint against rates of the Oregon-Washington Railway and Navigation company to Burlington system points in the middle west and to the Missouri river, declaring them unreasonable as compared with rates from mills in the Spokane territory.

Rates from Perry, LaGrande, Baker, Wallawa and Elgin were ordered placed on a parity with Spokane rates. From Cascade Locks and Hood River a cent differential was allowed, while from Bristol Veil a five cent differential was granted. The lowest present differentials are 9 cents.

What the Case Involved

Portland, Or., Nov. 27.—The Eastern Oregon Lumber Producers' association case was heard by the commission December 1, 1914. The association had appealed to the commission for rates into C. and O. territory by way of the O. W. R. & N. Oregon Short Line and Union Pacific railroad through Cheyenne, Wyoming, which should be the same as those applying from Spokane by way of the northern lines through Billings, Montana.

It is assumed by O. W. R. and N. officials here that the commission followed the precedent established in the Silver Bow gateway case, wherein through rates were ordered from Spokane by way of the Oregon Short Line.

The O. W. R. and N. made no particular resistance to the granting of through rates to Cheyenne, Wyo., but to having been the one to fight the lumbermen, local officials said.

HOLD NO SESSION IN STEAMSHIP CASE

Prosecution Has Dozen More Important Witnesses To Call

New York, Nov. 27.—No session of the trial of officials of the Hamburg-American Steamship company, charged with customs violations, in supplying German commerce raiders, was held today. The prosecution has a dozen more important witnesses, through whom it hopes to connect the Hamburg men and German Attacke Boyed-out with the voyage of the steamer Quetzada, which the defense has declined to admit was connected with a number of admitted mailings to meet raiders. It is likely, on the other hand, that the defense will close with a mere statement and present no witnesses.

Consul Makes Advances

San Francisco, Nov. 27.—German Consul Franz Bopp employed C. C. Crowley, investigator for District Attorney Pickert and former Southern Pacific detective, charged with being an anti-bomb plotter.

This much loomed up as a certainty in the case today. Crowley confessed it; Bopp admitted it after having previously denied.

Both, however, disclaimed any guilty action by Crowley. Crowley said his work was in tracing the activities of allied agents in this country. Bopp declared he was engaged chiefly in ferreting out British recruiting here—not at all, in getting information as to munitions shipments.

Crowley was angered at intimations that he had confessed to a part in the nation-wide bomb plotting. His life, he said had been open, his deeds lawful. Anyone claiming differently, he allowed, should be tarred and feathered.

Meantime, he was out on bail, while federal officials sought to run down data to connect him with "higher ups."

Bopp justified his employment of Crowley on the ground that the British consulate had engaged Pickertons. Moreover, he added, none of Crowley's work had been other than legitimate.

Release of Crowley on $5,000 bail for trial December 3 seemed likely today. The government insisted on a surety company bond but arrangements were under way to get it.

Thus far Crowley professes not to be worried over the situation and in fact, he jocularly suggested he would take off his coat and assist the investigators to get to the bottom of the whole bomb conspiracy.

Crowley's attorneys supplemented his statement with an announcement that Crowley had traveled extensively for the German consul and had borne important documents eastward, as well as engaging in collecting munitions data. He denied emphatically, however, that Crowley had been guilty of any overt acts whatsoever.

Falconer Not Surprised

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 27.—The arrest at San Francisco of C. C. Crowley, in connection with Pacific coast war plots caused no surprise today to Raleigh Falconer, in jail here on a smuggling charge, who yesterday made a statement asserting he had been offered $500 to assist in blowing up a German laden barge in Seattle harbor. In his statement to the newspapers, Falconer admitted he had worked here with Walter J. Brown, alias Lewis J. Smith, who supplied the information which led to Crowley's apprehension. He declared the leader of the alleged conspiracy band was still on the Pacific coast, although declining to name him. When informed later of Crowley's arrest, Falconer exclaimed: "I knew he'd be caught."

MARSHFIELD GAME TIED

Marshfield, Ore., Nov. 26.—In a sea of mud and a cold driving rain, the Oregon freshmen and Marshfield high school football teams battled today for four quarters without either side scoring. In the last quarter Oregon had the ball on Marshfield's two-yard line for three downs, but could not put the ball over. Seaman then punted out of danger, and the Marshfield eleven had the pigskin on the Oregon 50-yard line when the game ended.

Oregon was penalized twice, once for offside and 15 yards for holding. The Marshfield team outplayed the visitors in the first half, but the freshmen had the ball dangerously near a touchdown in the third and fourth quarters. Marshfield held when the freshmen had the ball on their 10-yard line in the third quarter, and Seaman punted out of danger.

The game was full of fumbles, several punts were blocked and the players were literally mudpie heroes. Most, halfback on the freshman team, retired in the first half. Jensen played great ball, as well as Fullbeck, Holsington, Jusson, for the freshmen, outpunted Seaman about 10 yards on every exchange.
